

Coveralls & Tell-Alls

Book Sheila to speak to your groups, teams, or top producers

You spend a lifetime building a legacy. Too many people allow their legacy to be built without thought or purpose. Which means they fail to fully grasp their leadership potential in the moment.

Learn the tips and tricks of building your legacy through southern charm. Sheila leads you through the almost traumatic comedy of life on the farm and how those life lessons will impact your ability to connect with your team.

Southern Tips for Success

Be Proud of Where You Come From

This is where your story begins. It begins with the past. Think of your stompin' grounds and what great experiences you had.

Admit Your Mistakes

One of the hardest things to ever do, yet the easiest way to connect with others, Admitting Your Mistakes.

Communicate

People can get just plain tore up about misunderstandings. Find ways to convey what you need to and check their understanding before disaster strikes.

Laugh at Yourself

Laughing burns calories, laughing makes you happy and goodness does learning to laugh at yourself improve your life. Your connector skills will be heightened as you develop the stories that make you famous.

Serve Others

Serving others never goes out of style and is always good manners. We know that servant leadership is important, yet we still seem to struggle with the behaviors to support that thought.

Live with Purpose and Passion

At the end of the day, what is your legacy? What will people celebrate when they think of you? Legacies don't happen on their own. A legacy encompasses the passions of our lives. Too many people leave legacy to chance. Don't be that person.

Sheila Pierson has a passion for helping coworkers and friends succeed. She has a fifteen year accomplished track record of coaching for success, as well as inspiring others to lead teams through chaos into achieving remarkable results.

From the barn to the boardroom to the civic hall, her message is clear and simple; live toward your legacy.

Sheila uses her Southern charm to entertain while mastering the art of storytelling to reach audiences and individuals.

For booking information call or e-mail Sheila at:
479-427-6043
shepierson@gmail.com